THE UNEXPECTED.

A woman's unreasoning wrath filled Janet. Only automobile curtains between her and a torrential storm, the car crippled on a dark and unknown road, miles from habitation, and she alone with Roy Nicoll! She remembered quickly a previous occasion when she was alone with Roy Nicoll in his car. Her anger and vexation were overwhelmed by sudden fear. There was no other thing for Nicoll to do but stay with her in the car in. Nicoll took off his great fur coat and put it about her in spite of her protests.

"I'm afraid I'll have to wait some time," he said. "I don't intend you shall feel cold—or catch one! This is enough bad luck for one day!" Even the thought of resisting this kindness in the face of his determination seemed repugnant to her. Nothing, nothing, nothing, Janet kept telling herself passionately, should be added to increase Walt's burden or add a joy to his discouragement.

Nicoll took off his great fur coat and put it about her in spite of her protests. "I'm afraid I'll have to wait some time," he said. "I don't intend you shall feel cold—or catch one! This is enough bad luck for one day!" Even the thought of resisting this kindness in the face of his determination seemed repugnant to her. Nothing, nothing, nothing, Janet kept telling herself passionately, should be added to increase Walt's burden or add a joy to his discouragement.

"What are you going to do?" "Get help," he said. "In that light suit?" she cried. "You mustn't—or at least take your coat!" She took off his great coat and reached it to him. He shook his head. "Can't walk in it," he said. "A swimming suit would serve better."

He reached down into a leather pocket and took something out. He hesitated, then put a revolver in her hand. "Not that you'll have the slightest use for it. But it may make you easier alone."

He jumped out into the storm, fastened the door tightly and was gone. Janet had plenty of time to get over her surprise and relief at Nicoll's behavior. It was not only that he did not do the wrong thing, but that he did the right thing with such a sure and delicate touch.

An hour later she heard voices and Nicoll put his head into the car, a glare of lamps from behind lighting him up. He was as drenched as though he had fallen into a river. "All right," he called out cheerfully. "Get a towel, supper and drink of poor but hot coffee for you!"

They reached Philadelphia in time for Janet to put up at a hotel and change her clothes. Later she met Nicoll, who had gotten into evening clothes at his hotel. She heard him present an eloquent, forceful case for his magazine before the committee of women which was to report to the congress, and saw the admiration that underlay their prompt and unanimous acceptance of his proposal. Personality, influence, a certain youthful vitality and buoyancy, confidence which inspires confidence and builds the success it expects—these radiated from Nicoll-inaction like the warmth and brightness of a great room of dynamo.

After the committee had adjourned, Nicoll took Janet back to her hotel in his machine.

"Now your stunt comes tomorrow," he said. "Good luck, but I know you don't need it. I'm going back to New York tonight. I'll give Walt a call on the phone to tell him you're all right!"

AIR ALL GARMENTS.

Air garments when they come from the laundry and again before use. Serious illnesses often come from damp bed clothes. Also all clothing that has been packed away, or hanging in wardrobes for some time, such as coats and winter dresses, should be aired thoroughly before wearing.

USE OF FEATHER DUSTERS.

Feather dusters are disease breeders and should not be used especially when there are babies in the house. They do not get rid of the dirt, they spread it. Germs lurk in the feathers and are carried from one room

J. FRANK TALTON IS TO BE SPEAKER

Salt Lake, Jan. 6.—J. Frank Tolton of Beaver will be recommended by the nominating committee of the lower house caucus this morning for the speakership of the house of representatives of the state legislature. To Weber county the committee has assigned the position of chief clerk of the house and to Cache county the position of sergeant at arms. Others positions in the lower house have been distributed among the various counties.

The caucus of the house began yesterday afternoon in response to a call issued by Mr. Tolton on the authority of the general Democratic meeting of the lower house thirty-eight were in attendance, and practically every county in the state was represented.

The appointment of a nominating committee and a rules committee was about the only action taken by the caucus.

Some of the biggest counties, Salt Lake and Weber particularly, insisted on having more than one representative on the nominating committee, but they lost the ballot and the seven committees were selected from as many counties.

The nominating committee is composed of Mrs. H. J. Hayward of Salt Lake, chairman; Wynn L. Eddy of Box Elder, secretary; D. D. McKay of Weber, Joseph E. Cardon of Logan, Alma Greenwood of Utah, J. H. Mace of Sanpete and George W. Decker of Iron. The rules committee comprises Richard W. Young, Jr. of Salt Lake, J. L. Boyden of Summit and J. Alex Bevan of Tooele.

Trouble developed in the committee room when the sifting of applications for employees of the house began. There weren't nearly enough door-keeper's jobs to go round and the committee settled itself down to selecting and apportioning positions in job lots to counties which seemed to have applicants who could best fill the positions.

To Salt Lake and Weber went a big percentage of the jobs where skill and experience were required.

This afternoon there will be a joint caucus of both houses of the legislature, which probably will be followed by a meeting of the general legislative committee. All subcommittees have been instructed to present at the meeting of the legislative committee their reports on assignments given last month.

PRINTERS NAME THEIR OFFICERS

Last night, the organized printers of Ogden held their annual meeting and elected officers for the coming year. T. S. Feeny, Jr., was chosen president and the other positions were filled as follows: A. F. Jilson, vice president; C. G. Riser, secretary; treasurer; F. A. Zitzman, sergeant-at-arms; Vernon Gray, R. F. Stevens and A. L. Jost, auditing committee; W. H. Adams, A. T. Hansen and W. H. Kowar, delegates to the central trades and labor assembly.

The meeting, which was held in the Owl's lodge room, was attended by about forty members of the local union and an excellent spirit of harmony prevailed. A feature of the program was an address by the new president, in which he paid a fine tribute to the retiring president, Joseph H. Randall, and the latter was later given a standing vote of thanks by the printers.

NEW GOLF COURSE IS 6,294 YARDS LONG

Facilities for the Pacific coast golf er grow apace. According to a Portland newspaper, when the improvements at the Portland Golf club and the Tautain Country club are completed, Portland will be able to boast of three, and perhaps four, of the finest and most picturesque golf links in the west. At present the Waverly country club is the only 18-hole course.

Work on enlarging from nine holes to 18 already is under way, both at the Tautain and at the Portland club, and hopes for the new municipal course have by no means been abandoned.

Plans are all drawn and actual work is being done at the Portland links. Plans also have been prepared by the Tautain officials and these are now being gone over by Chandler Egan of Medford.

The new Tautain course will be approximately 6,294 yards long, or nearly 100 yards longer than Waverly. The first nine will be 3,204 yards and will embrace only the first four holes of the present course. After fourth hole the course will swing off to the west into the woods and skirt the Tautain river.

The first nine will finish with a short mashie pitch of 140 yards over a water hazard onto a terraced green just to the northwest of the clubhouse.

The second nine holes likewise will be carved out of the woods, but will swing into the present course at the fifth hole, finishing on the present ninth.

THOUSANDS AT RECEPTION GIVEN BY THE GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF UTAH

(Special to the Standard.)

Salt Lake City, Jan. 5.—The spirit of democracy reigned tonight in the state capitol as never before in the history of affairs social in Utah, while approximately 15,000 people paid their respects to the state's first Democratic governor, Simon Bamberger, his fellow state officials, United States Senator-elect William H. King and Congress man-elect Milton H. Welling.

Congressman James H. Mays was missing from the receiving line, having found it impossible to leave Washington to attend the reception.

From all parts of Utah came those who desired to pledge fealty to the little "big" man whom they would some two months ago to preside over the destinies of Utah for the next four years. There were those there, too, who had not so willed, but proved their Americanism by acknowledging their desire to abide by the decision of the majority of their fellow citizens with a hearty handshake with the men honored. Ogden was well represented in the throng, numerous prominent Democrats from the Weber county seat of government being seen and recognized in the mass of humanity that good naturedly fought its way toward the reception room. State representatives and senators-elect from numerous counties, arriving in the city early to prepare for the coming session of the legislature, were also there to welcome their constituents to the statehouse and to accept the hospitality of the governor and Mrs. Bamberger, for the evening.

Among the early arrivals, who were given special ways to the receiving line, were former Governor and Mrs. William Spry and members of the former governor's staff, and a few minutes later, the members of the Salt Lake city commission pledged their fealty to the new state executive.

All Classes Present. This representative gathering was in full keeping with the broad spirit of the invitation extended by Governor and Mrs. Bamberger, that found its way to all corners of the state through the medium of the press, their only messenger, being formed of people of many nationalities, religious and political faiths. In housing it for the few hours before midnight, the big statehouse, farmer, student, educator, physician, merchant, manufacturer, banker, broker and politician brushed shoulders with each other, no favors shown but in excellent good nature. Of the crowd, about one-third were women and they too accepted the inevitable, crushed hats, etc., in good spirit.

Those in Line. The affair was brilliant in the magnificence of its setting, the state capitol being aglow with myriad lights and band music could be heard throughout the building all evening. The receiving line was formed about 7:45 o'clock, with Governor and Mrs. Bamberger at its head. With them were their daughter, Miss Elsa, and the others in the line were United States Senator-elect William H. King and daughter, Miss Adrienne; Congress man-elect and Mrs. M. H. Welling, Secretary of State and Mrs. Harden Benson and daughter, Miss Esther; Justice and Mrs. E. E. Coffman, State Auditor and Mrs. Joseph Ririe, State Treasurer and Mrs. D. O. Larson, State Superintendent of Public Instruction and Mrs. E. G. Gowans, Mrs. James H. Mays, Attorney General and Mrs. Dan B. Shields.

The doors to the reception room were opened promptly at the appointed hour, 8 o'clock, and the crowd, which had long awaited the moment, surged forward and was ushered in to greet the host and hostess of the evening. For this service, the members of the governor's staff were called into service and a merry time they had of it keeping the people in the front of the throng from being avalanched into the receiving hall by those in the rear. At intervals, the doors were closed, but this had little effect on those who had come to greet the governor, and it was nearly 11 o'clock before the crowd showed any signs of diminishing. All who entered the room were cordially greeted and left it noticeably pleased.

View of the Capitol. Passing out of the reception room, after having attained their purpose, the guests joined the hundreds of others who awaited a later opportunity of getting into the official presence.

In wandering at will through the labyrinth of rooms in the capitol, admiring the architecture furniture and furnishings, until the strains of music led them down onto the ground floor, where in an alcove Mollerup's thirty-five piece band was stationed. The musicians had opened their program, simultaneously with the commencement of the reception, with a patriotic air. This concluded, they began to fulfill the purpose of their engagement and the governor's ball was on. Soon the spacious tiled floor was filled with youthful dancers and until midnight a goodly portion of the visitors, including many of the older people, enjoyed this entertainment.

Light Refreshments. Light refreshments were served on the main floor, and in the cafeteria light lunches were served to all comers. About the only seemingly accurate estimate of the crowd in attendance was furnished by the caterer. After 200 gallons of punch had been disposed of on the main floor, no further record was kept, but in the cafeteria provision had been made to care for 500 persons and the supply of coffee, sandwiches and sweetmeats was disposed of before more than half the crowd had been served.

When the handshaking had been concluded, the governor and those of the reception line were served with a modest banquet in the cafeteria. But the end of the handshaking did not mark the close of the festivities. Those who did not leave for home wandered through the corridors of the capitol and down to the ground floor, where the dance was in progress. The musicians tooted and scraped until the lips and arms were weary, but the crowd applauded for more and at the hour of midnight only signified the end of a most successful and happy event.

LEGISLATIVE BILLS ARE RESPONSIVE TO PROMISES

Utah's long-desired publicity utilities bill, as drafted for the coming legislature by the sub-committee of which Charles C. Richards is chairman, was submitted to Governor Simon Bamberger Thursday for suggestions. The governor will probably return the bill to the sub-committee Monday or Tuesday and his suggestions will be considered. The measure will then be submitted to the full steering committee for delivery to the legislature, which convenes Monday.

The prohibition bill, drafted by a sub-committee of which Senator Joseph Chee of Ogden is chairman, will be submitted to the full committee at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Salt Lake. After examination, the draft will probably be submitted to the governor.

The prohibition bill will be the first measure passed by the legislature.

New Bills Have "Teeth." While hurrying to the train on his way to Salt Lake at 8 o'clock this morning, Judge Richards was asked if any "dental work" had been done lately on the proposed measure. Replying, emphatically, he said the bills have teeth, sharp and strong enough for the desired purposes.

Asked concerning the taxation bill, in the drafting of which he is assisting, Judge Richards reiterated his recent assurances that the measure would place the rich and the poor upon the same basis, that its provisions would prevent the rich from escaping their just share of taxation, and that it would greatly relieve the burden of the poor.

HEADWORK LIGHTENS HOUSEWORK

MAKE HOUSEWORK EASY.

By PROF. P. G. HOLDEN.

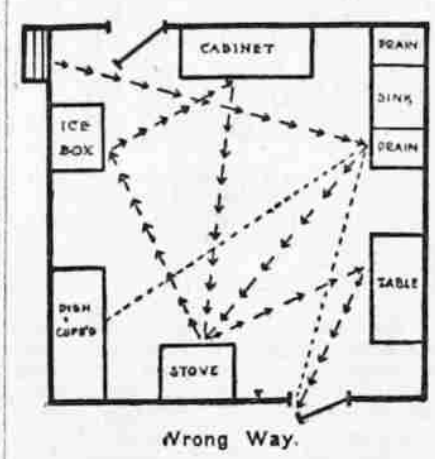

Is it not surprising to find that a saving housewife is often wasteful and extravagant? If we were to say: "The average housewife throws away $300 a year," or if we said: "She wastes a pound of sugar a week," we should begin at once to search for the reason and the remedy for the waste. Yet the waste of vital energy is much more extravagant and the consequences much more serious.

The average woman wastes a vast amount of energy in useless walking. Her kitchen furnishings are arranged around the wall in such a way that she crosses and recrosses the central floor space from one place to another. Don't cross your tracks.

In planning the kitchen we find there are just two main processes in all kitchen work. One process is to prepare the meal; the other to clear it away. Disorganization in the kitchen means wasted energy.

Standardize the arrangement of your kitchen by placing the equipment, stove, sink, icebox or cupboard, table, etc., in right relation to each other. Material and furniture for clearing away should be arranged with the same object in view.

We have taken for example a kitchen measuring 15 feet by 15 feet in size. We measure the distance traveled in preparing one vegetable, from cellar to sink for the washing, to stove for cooking, to icebox or cooler and cabinet for butter or cream and seasoning, back to stove, to table for dishing up, to dining room. The distance traveled was 75½ feet.

In clearing away this one dish the distance traveled was 32½ feet. In the second diagram we have shown the same kitchen with furnishings rearranged with a view to placing the equipment used for preparing the meal and that for clearing away in the right relation to each other. The distance traveled in preparing one vegetable with this arrangement was only 52½ feet, and in clearing away only 20 feet.

Figuring on this basis that we should prepare on an average five dishes for each meal and three meals a day for one month we should save more than 15,000 feet of walking by having the equipment arranged as in the second diagram. In one year the distance saved in steps would amount to more than 25 miles.

Have Right Equipment.

When the furniture has been arranged so that the work may be done with the fewest steps, then study each task and have the right equipment and tools for each.

Is the dishpan below or within reach of the sink or is it in a cupboard across the room? Is there a little shelf over the sink on which can be kept soap, etc., and a narrow strip of hooks above the sink for such things as soap, dishes, dish mops, dippers, etc.?

Has the work table shallow drawers which hold carving knives, work spoons, knives, forks, etc., and a deeper drawer for extra towels, holders, etc.? Are the skillets, saucepans, kettles, long spoons, etc., on shelves or hook strips near the stove? Have we really furnished the kitchen with all the convenient work tools we can afford? If not, why not?

ing, Judge Richards reiterated his recent assurances that the measure would place the rich and the poor upon the same basis, that its provisions would prevent the rich from escaping their just share of taxation, and that it would greatly relieve the burden of the poor.

"Every Knock a Boost."

Asked if the drafting committees were reading the editorial pleas of reactionary newspapers in defense of interest opposed to the proposed legislation, Judge Richards said: "The committees are working openly and have nothing to conceal. The sole aim is to fulfill the platform and campaign pledges of the Democratic party. The fullest publicity is welcome."

He added a remark to the effect that every knock from certain sources is a boost for political reform.

When his attention was called to the declaration by Mayor Abbot R. Heywood, in a speech before the canners' convention yesterday that in all the publicity concerning the proposed new laws, he had not read a single line promising constructive legislation, Judge Richards laughed and remarked that the opposition regards the proposed popular laws as "destructive," rather than constructive. He had no further reply to the mayor's remark.

In view of the fact that machinery necessary for the new sugar plant will not be available this year, the erection of the factory will not take place until 1918. It was said, however, that the plant would be completed in time to handle the 1918 business.
